THE BOOK OF DEBORAH

Jim Comes Out of His Delirium—So Deb Isn't Needed Anymore!

So Deborah Burns, the finest girl I have ever known, came and went in the hospital as freely as Jim's wife ought to have done. And Ann Lorrimer was put to bed at home and cared for by a trained nurse. Ann likes to be nursed. A small indisposition affords her a grand excuse for a regular orgy of laziness.

Deborah looked like a goddess of reclusion. I thought, as I took her over to the hospital. She was immaculate in white dimity and she wore a nurse's cap on her smooth crown, and her shining cropped curls made a lovely halo above her calm brow.

The internes were quite fascinated, wherefore some of the prettier nurses came suddenly to Deborah. About Jim's delirium I said nothing. I thought it was a matter of course. But it didn't matter. If only our Jimmy-boy got well, nothing else mattered to Deb.

Deb, always at hand to be called to Jim's bedside, had never so beautiful. Her face was illumined by some great determination. Perhaps Jeanne d'Arc looked so when she went to the stake.

Jim never recognized her, at any time. His inhibitions prevailed when she was with him, but he smiled when she spoke, and went to sleep only when she held his hand. He certainly lived through a peculiar kind of a double life while his fever lasted.

"Our patient is much better," said the surgeon one evening. The head nurse repeated the good news when Deb and I were leaving the hospital. I caught her hidden meaning. It was highly probable that they could dispense with Miss Burns' presence next day.

I felt that I ought to prepare Deborah—she might wish to take a last long look at the man she adored—but I couldn't find courage to put my thought into words.

Bob phoned from the hospital as usual early in the morning. Bob's messages to me had restored our old previous plane of common interests. "Jim's fever has gone down," Bob announced.

"Will he live?" I asked. "The doctor can't tell. But you'd better encourage mother. Jim's come out of the delirium and I guess that Deb—"

Deb paused and I finished his sentence. "Deb isn't needed any more!" "That's about it, I'm afraid."

I couldn't phone that news to poor Deborah. I went over to her home. She was ready, as usual, to get into my car.

Girls, Don't Wash Your Face

Use Liska cold cream instead (you have never used anything like it). Just try it once, and you will never be without it. Soap and water has a tendency to make the skin rough, and does not cleanse the skin as thoroughly as Liska cold cream. To prove it make this test: Wash your face with soap and water, dry thoroughly, then apply Liska cold cream, massage it well into the skin, then wipe the surplus cream off with a soft white cloth; examine the skin and see how much dirt has accumulated thereon. Liska cold cream cleanses, softens and beautifies the skin. For sunburn or after a dusty auto trip there's nothing like it. It's fine after shaving, too. Let hubby or brother try it. Most consumers Liska cold cream with any other you have ever used, and you will need no further argument to convince you that it's the best. It's put up in tubes, the only sanitary way. Try it tonight. You will be delighted. At toilet counters everywhere including Kimball & Huftlett and the Owl Drug Co.

Use Black and White Ointment to Remove Skin Blemishes

When the skin has become badly discolored through exposure to sun and wind, when it is marred by pimples, tan, liver spots, you should use Black and White Ointment. Black and White Ointment contains ingredients which have a marvelous capacity for removing discolorations of the skin, and which keep it soft, clear and youthful.

This creamy emollient will also be found ideal in restoring the delicate pink tint and freshness to a faded, drab, muddy, dull, lifeless complexion. Or if your complexion is inclined to oiliness or greasiness, Black and White Ointment will cool and refresh the skin, leaving it soft and clear.

Just before retiring thoroughly cleanse the skin with Black and White Soap. Dry with a coarse towel. Then mix according to directions given with package. Gently massage on the face, allowing it to remain until morning, when you again cleanse the skin with Black and White Soap. Repeat this for several nights and soon you will be delighted with the improvement in your complexion. If at first the skin should seem a little tender, discontinue for a night or two, then resume as before.

Black and White Ointment is for sale at all drug and department stores. 25c the package (50c also contains three times as much). Black and White Soap 50c the cake. Send 10c to Dept. H. T. K. Plough Chemical Company, Memphis, Tenn., for samples of Black and White Ointment and Soap. Also copy of your Birthday Readings.

"We're not going to the hospital this morning," I said, not realizing what my words might imply. "Dead?" Her lips shaped the word. "Better! Better!" I said hurriedly. The poor child put her face on my arm. "But quite collapsed," I continued. "Temperature down, delirium gone." "I understand," she whispered. "I'm not to see him again." She held her pretty head high. "Don't worry about me, Jane dear. Remember my prayer—made in the dust of the open road. The Lord has answered it. He has let Jim stay with us. If I never see Jim, I'll never be unhappy. I helped him when he needed me. He was my own for a little while. All mine. I can be content the rest of my days. You've been awfully understanding, Jane!" With that she turned and went into the house. I went home wondering how long the poor girl could maintain that difficult pose.

WEANING THE BABY

A baby should not be fed at the breast after one year. At that age he needs a more solid food to make him grow strong.

A baby should be weaned gradually, and the milk at first should be only half the strength of the formula used for a normal child of the same age. Then the milk should be gradually increased in strength.

Weaning may usually begin at about the ninth month, by giving baby one feeding of cow's milk, using two parts milk to one part water. If he digests this well, the amount of water can be decreased gradually until at 10 or 11 months he may be taking whole milk. The amount of milk feeding can be slowly increased as the breast feedings are decreased, until at one year of age the baby is weaned entirely. A baby weaned at nine or ten months may be taught to take milk from a cup.

Increase in the baby's diet must be made with caution, especially during the summer. It is better to keep the baby on a low diet than to upset his digestion by over-feeding.

A baby one year of age in July should not be weaned during the hot months if he is doing well. Infants should be weaned when the mothers are suffering from a disease which they might transmit to the child, such as typhoid fever and tuberculosis. If the mother is suffering from some disease which might be aggravated by nursing, such as Bright's disease, tuberculosis and acute pneumonia. The infant should likewise be weaned if the mother becomes pregnant, or if she is suffering from inflammation of the breast.

I am only 25 years old, and have wrinkles in my cheeks. I have tried the best cream to remove them, but I can't. What shall I do? Can you give me the address of a doctor who can help me?

A. The application of creams will probably not help your wrinkles. thought facial massage and the application of hot and cold water alternately, supplanted by brisk rubbing with a towel, may improve the general tone of the parts. If you are otherwise well, you will do well to forget your wrinkles. A smiling, cheerful countenance is an effective antidote.

"Men Do Not Try To Keep Women Down in Business"—She Knows!

Incentive and Common Sense, Advertising Woman's Record For Success.

NEW YORK—Down the gangplank of the Rochambeau, in from France the other day, stepped a young woman not yet 30, her golden hair glistening in the good old American sunshine again. She has the reputation of being one of Wall street's highest paid women, and she was just back from a vacation in Europe. Her motor car was waiting a few steps down the pier. It whisked her off to her home in Larchmont Manor, up Land Island Sound from New York City.

Five years ago these trappings of the wealthy were not for her, for she was a stenographer then, living on a weekly salary of $15.

But Miss Alice Houston had a hunch that she could do something of more importance to the business world than operate a typewriter. "I think stenography one of the biggest fields for the modern girl," said Miss Houston, "and I would advise every ambitious girl to study it. As a stepping stone to other positions, it is like a magic key which unlocks all the doors."

Advertising Problems But today today she has her own stenographer in the Wall street office where she conducts her advertising business. The firm, of which she is an officer, handles the advertising accounts of several dozen banks from Massachusetts to California. Five New York banks on Wall street, Fifth avenue and Broadway intrust their advertising problems to her firm.

Bankers in Chicago, Denver, Memphis and Atlanta know her, for she drops in on them every now and then to study their local problems. And with the experience she has acquired in this specialized field she is able to tell shrewd men of affairs how to make more money for their bank and how to serve their community better.

And this specialized training of hers brings her in an annual salary that runs into five figures. "How does she do it?" one is inclined to ask of this young woman who blew into the big city from Kansas five years ago with nothing much more than a knowledge of Pittman and a degree from the University of Kansas.

"Please," begs Miss Houston, "say that any woman who has the necessary incentive and some common sense can do what I've done. It bore me to read accounts of successful women which set them forth as so many super-females."

No Rules for Success "I never followed any rules for success, as they call them. All a girl needs to get ahead, I think, is ambition, confidence in herself, and a little boost at the right time—especially confidence. The reason why so many girls with ability stay in the rut is because they lack confidence more than any other quality."

Miss Houston started at $15 a week; now her annual salary runs into five figures.

"I've only found one advantage in being a woman. I can always get a hearing. But once that hearing is had I am treated just the same as a man. The reason why women are almost always seen in, I think, partly an instinct of gallantry and partly of a natural curiosity."

"To offset this, however, there are some disadvantages. One of them is that men are not inclined to take what a woman says as seriously as they would the statements of a compeer. So I have to be particularly careful to get my facts right."

"I wish I could place on a billboard this statement: Men do not try to keep women down in business. There's not a bit of truth in that suggestion. All the men I have been associated with have not only been fair, but perhaps even a little more kind and helpful than I had a just right to expect."

THE GOLDEN-PLATED RULE

By Lillian Paschal Day

THAT'S THE ANSWER I had a lovely dream. It was about a plumber. Can't be done. Yes? It can. You can dream anything. This dream-plumber worked for me. Charged by the hour, as usual. He brought his tools with him. Never sent a boy back for them! He worked fast—no sabotage! Results were fine—and stayed so! Everything worked smoothly. When he was through, he went. Didn't stop for expensive talk! His bill came. It was a wonder. He hadn't charged $3.50 an hour! Only one dollar an hour! No charge for going and coming! No extra materials! No helper! In short, it was fair.

Just what he earned, no more. I paid him joyfully. Asked him how about it? His answer stunned me. "I'm a Golden Rule plumber. I do as I'd be done by. Profiteers I hate. So I don't profiteer myself. Wish every one would follow suit. Prices would tumble in a day." I fainted and fell over. My nose hit the floor. I waked up with a headache. It was only a dream. But I guess it's the answer. What? Why? the Golden Rule. Isn't it odd? We all want others to follow it. But we don't want to, ourselves.

WHAT IS YOUR ATTITUDE ON IMMIGRATION

Policeman: "Keep 'em out. They do most of our crimes." Salesman: "Immigration should be carefully supervised. We need all the good men we can get." Engraver: "Too big a question to swallow at one bite. Immigration made the United States. It is the foundation of our existence and greatness and wealth."

Anarchists: "Immigration should be unrestricted, except, possibly, criminals." Doctor: "Let all we can get come in."

Oil Man: "We could afford to trade a lot of native-born Americans for some of the foreigners according to come here. But we should keep out all with prison records and those that ought to have them."

Publisher: "I favor strict immigration regulation as to character and regulation as to number according to needs and facilities for correct distribution of this new population."

Cattleman: "Should be restricted but not stopped. We want only those that will become good citizens, preferably those that will work on farms. Send them out to the ranches and we'll take care of the bad ones."

Superintendent: "Let immigrants in. Farmers aren't working their land to capacity because they can't get help. Americans, apparently, won't be laborers any more, so we'll have to import them."

Leader of Negro Jazz Band: "My ancestors were kidnapped and forced to become immigrants to America. I'm satisfied with what happened. We
